Foreign Letter.

LONDON, May 5, 1870. The little extent of territory in the South of Europe, known as Greece, has again been forcing herself into notice, and in such a way as to make one's blood boil.

About three weeks since, a party of ladies and gentlemen, consisting of Lord and Lady Muncaster, Mr. Lloyd with his wife and child. Mr. Vyner, Mr. Herbert, Secretary of the British Legation, and Count do Boyl, Secretary of the Italian Legation, set out for an excursion to the battlefield of Marathon, a few hours' journey from Athens. Although they had considered omparatively safe, they had applied for, and obtained from the government a small military escort, it being on foot, however, while the party were in carriages. Being ad of the guard, and when sing under Pentelicus, they were surcounded by the brigands which infest that region, and before the soldiers could put selves into effective shape, the whole party were carried off into the mountains, and a heavy sum demanded for their liber-ation. The ladies were allowed to depart with Lord Muneaster, who, on paroic, was deputed to bring provisions for his friends and arrange the terms of ransom. The miscreants demanded full pardon and in-demnity for themselves, and £25,000 as money for their prisoners. But the Greek government refused to pay the ransom declined to give the pardon de-manded, and sent their troops to hom inthe brigands, who, finding the The Times takes a yery

The Royal Academy opened on Mon-day. "Old Inhabitants" tell us the exhi-bition is about on a par with those of former years. Among the wealth of beautiful pictures, I may be .pardoned for desng'one or two. A French artist, one M. Gerome, has contributed a painting, "The death of Marshal Ney." I can not exteritic enough to point out the classic cies, but it is one of those pictures which once looked on, would be long reambered. It is of the simplest simplicity in design. Under the ty is design. Under the walls of the Laxembourg, whose seanty trees stand glost-like in the gloom; face downward, lake in old feshioned blue cloth-coat, lies he who was a country alterney's son, a prince, and the vector in eighty battles. You can see the mark of the battles. You can see the mark of the feet in the wet earth where he stood till they shot him down. In front the castridge cases are still smoking on the grounds, and the soldiers who once followed his leadership, are marching off at quick pace, with irregular bayonets, the efficiency half turning to see who has been done. On the wall are the fresh dimpletions, half-legible, which tell of the rise and falled Kingdien and Ferrise and the regime who had been done. PHILLDELPHIA, May 21.

This morning's session of the Presbyterian General Assembly was occupied with consideration of the report of the joint Committee on Reconstruction. The report fives the boundaries of various of roots by States and counties. It recommended that the Assembly reconstruct the boundaries of different Presbyteries according to the following principles: That each presbytery be defined by geographical boundaries; that presbyteries be enlarged and the formation of small ones discouranced, none horeafter to be form if to consist of less than five ministers; that in the pre-screen distribution or filarte function for the first than five ministers; that in the pre-screen distribution or fullare function for the first than five ministers;

The bridal party arranged themselves at one end of the parlor, Bishop Brown facing them. The guests gathered around. The coremony was then performed. This being finished, the usual interchange of civilities passed. A string band engaged for the occasion was missing, and did not pat in an appearance until an hour after the marriage had ended and the visitors had begun to arrive.

put in an appearance until an hour after the marriage had ended and the visitors had begun to arrive.

The bride, Miss Cordelia Downing, daughter of Georgo T. Downing, the well known caterer, is a young lady of twenty-one years of age, petite in figure and of more than ordinary beauty. Her wedding toilet consisted of a moire antique, round point lace, and train three yards in length, white veil, head dress of orange blossoms, diamonds and pearls. The bridesmaids wore white tarlatan puffed, white sath panniers and pearlo rnaments. The groom, Mark R. De Mortie, was born in Virginia of colored parents of French descent. He is at present engaged in business in Richmond, Va., where he is one of the firm of John I. Jones & Co., real estate brokers. Mr. De Mortie is about thirty-five years of age, of fine figure and peculiarly intelligent and pleasant face.

The array of presents was large, and some were very costly and elegant, useful and ornamental. Among them, a very fine ring, with twelve diamonds encircling a large ruby, was the gift of the groom; also a ring with a coluster year, but the years of a modern of the groom; also a ring with a cluster of nine diamonds, from Mr. Washington, brother-in-law to the bride; a ring with a solitary pearl.

also a ring with a cluster of nine diamonds, from Mr. Washington, brother-in-law to the bride; a ring with a solitary pearl, from Senor Percy, of Cube; another ring from Senor Melendez, with five diamonds; George T. Downing and lady, the parents of the bride, gave a full set of china containing the bride's initial. A very fine assortment of laces was also presented. After some minutes passed in conversation the gueste retired to an elaborate supper, prepared in an apartment fitted up for the occasion, the ceiling being made of American flags. After supper, the music having arrived, dancing followed and was kept up well into morning. The couple will remain at the parents' residence for several days, when they will visit New York and Chicago, spend the summer at Newport, R. I., and next winter at Richmond, Va.
